

REVOLT AGAINST MURPHY GROWS UP THE STATE

Disgruntled Democrats Can Expect Little Aid From McCarren, However.

HIS LEADERS DESERT.

Six Already Under the Tammany Banner and Others Likely to Follow.

Several of the delegates from up-State who were treated with contempt by even violence in the recent Democratic State Convention are still in town mixing war medicine at the Hoffman House and the Victoria Hotel. They are to hold a meeting to-night and decide upon a future course of action.

Just at present there is strong talk of holding another State convention. Talk of this character will probably survive until somebody gets up and asks where the expense money is to come from. The insurgents claim that they can get twenty-five counties in line. They are waiting for advice from McCarren, and want to ally themselves with him against Murphy and Conners, although most of them, in ignorance of the fact that Murphy had erased them from the State rolls, were for a resolution unseating McCarren and his associates in the final session of the convention.

Black Eye for John O'Brien. Mayor McCarren is among those who are not pleased by the action of the State Convention on Monday. The Mayor wanted his chief adviser and able lieutenant, Water Commissioner John O'Brien, on the State Committee, but when the State Committee was made up, it was found that O'Brien had no place to go.

In other words Murphy had not seen fit to find a place for him as the representative of the Nineteenth District, in which he lives. Thomas P. McCarren, the old committeeman, and an ardent Murphy adherent, was retained.

It is reported about the City Hall that Mayor McCarren, after making his peace with Murphy, caused it to be known in Tammany Hall that he desired to have O'Brien appointed to a place on the State Committee. O'Brien's friends in Tammany Hall brought his case up to Murphy, and on Wednesday evening they told him that the boss was favorably inclined.

McCarren evidently refused to make way for O'Brien. At any rate the McCarren representative lost out. The Mayor would not talk about the matter to-day, but the O'Brienites made no attempt to conceal their feelings.

Why McCarren "Died."

In well informed Tammany circles it is reported that the real reason underlying Murphy's brutal assassination of the political prospects of Patrick H. McCarren is an ambition the Brooklyn leader cherished to control the next city convention and dictate the Mayoralty nomination. If McCarren's plans had gone through he would have been in line for the supreme control of the Democratic organization in Greater New York and Tammany Hall would have been relegated to second place.

At the time of the split between Mayor McCarren and Charles F. Murphy, Senator McCarren lost no time in actively associating himself with the McCarren faction. He was one of the Mayor's advisers, frequently visited the City Hall and dictated appointments with a view of strengthening his position in Brooklyn.

It wasn't long before Murphy saw the drift of things. McCarren, with his solid delegation from Brooklyn, a couple of leaders from Queens, and eight or ten from Manhattan, would be in control of the city convention next year. Murphy set about to upset McCarren's influence.

Downfall Long Planned.

His attempt to have McCarren thrown out of the State Committee in the fall of 1906 was the first step. He failed in that, but he kept busy, and the turning point of McCarren by the State Convention on Wednesday was the result of scheming and conniving extending over a period of many months. The reconciliation between Mayor McCarren and Tammany Hall was one of the steps in the preparations for Wednesday's coup in the convention.

The disgruntled up-State leaders who are looking for help from McCarren find that he has no interest in their troubles. He will have his hands full after the adjournment of the Legislature looking after his interests in Kings County. For the first time since he wrested control of the Kings County organization from the McLaughlin crowd he is fighting on the defensive.

As soon as McCarren gets back from Albany to-day he will force his leaders in Kings County to a show down, and he will find that at least six of his trusted men have deserted him. Among them is Conrad Hasenbush, who has always been looked upon as McCarren's right arm in Williamsburg. Hasenbush has gone over to Murphy. He "gave his face" in public Wednesday night in convention by voting against the resolution unseating McCarren delegates, but he has shown his true colors by accepting a place upon Murphy's "reorganization" committee, which is to "reorganize" the Democracy in Kings and other counties in the State.

Other Leaders Wavering.

McCarren has no farther interest in the delegates to the National Convention. He has established grounds for a contest before the Committee on Credentials in the Denver assembly by reading in the State Convention Wednesday night the minority report of the Committee on Contested Seats. It would do him no good to take part in a "rump" State convention.

Besides Hasenbush, Murphy has weaned away from McCarren P. H. Quinn, George A. Lindsay, Michael Butler, James S. Reagan, and William F. Delaney—all strong men who can carry their districts in any primary. Other leaders are wavering. It is experience of political bosses that when they meet with reverses the men whom they have held up and patronized the most are among the first to desert to the other side.

"THEY ALL LOOK ALIKE TO MARY."

One of the song hits of the year is "They All Look Alike to Mary," by Billy Kent. The "Follies of 1907," now on at the Grand Opera House, has kept his song in after driving out many others in the course of its year's run. The song is sung nightly by Miss Mary Kent, and is always greeted with applause. The words and music of this catchy ballad will be given with next Sunday's World. Music by arrangement with Maurice Shapiro.

The meeting of McCarren has put the election machinery of Kings County in Murphy's hands. At the proper time a notice will be sent to the Secretary of State, notifying him of the change in the composition of the Democratic organization of Kings and the regular authorization will be sent to the Mayor's representatives to enable them to take charge of the primaries at which delegates will be selected to the State Convention to nominate State candidates.

Between now and September McCarren will have all he can do to try to ward off this happening. If Murphy has his way McCarren will not have more than a handful of delegates in the State convention. Undoubtedly McCarren will move the courts again and wage a long, bitter war to save himself from complete ruin. He will have no time to devote to up-State leaders who voted on Wednesday night to unseat him. He was fortified with the might of his own political heads severed.

Murphy in Charge. When the State committee met late yesterday afternoon none of the victims of Murphy's "rule" attended except Mr. McCarren, of Queens. He was fortified with the proxy of Daniel Sheehan, of Queens.

Arthur A. McLean, of Orange, moved for the appointment of the committee under a resolution which recognized the section, group or faction of the party known as the Kings County Democratic Party, of which George V. S. Williams is Chairman of the General Committee, and then continued.

Resolved, That this convention directs and instructs the Democratic State Committee to enter any county or Assembly District from which a contest as to the regularity or election of delegates has been brought to this convention and organize the Democratic party in the county or district on such lines as will in its judgment be most conducive to Democratic regularity, harmony and success.

Following the adoption of this resolution Chairman Conners announced the committee of twelve, the list having been previously prepared by Leader Murphy with great care. They are: Arthur A. McLean, of Orange; William W. Farley, of Brooklyn; Winfield S. Huppert, of Washington; Edwin Bailey, of Brooklyn; Conrad Hasenbush, of Kings; Stephen Ryan, of Queens; T. W. P. McCarren, of Queens; James P. S. McCarren, of Queens; George W. Ratten, of Queens; and George V. S. Williams, of Queens.

TRIUMPHS IN EASTER JEWELRY!

A FRESH victory for Lambert goods and Lambert policies is the Easter demand for all the lines of jewelry we offer at prices that were not even thought of before we came into the field. No customer has gone away disappointed, and we have been especially attentive to those who look for elegance, beauty and substantial workmanship at low prices. To suppose that really honest high grade jewelry is expensive is a mistake, as we are proving every day.

No Doubt About These Wedding Rings.

Our initials on a wedding ring banish all doubt of its quality. They are a guarantee that the ring is seamless and that the gold is of the fineness represented—14, 18 or 22 karat, as the case may be. It is well for the bridegroom-elect to know this, for he is choosing a ring to be worn constantly for a lifetime. All styles and widths. No charge for engraving.
